Mayor Jennings and Other Officials Worry Over the Outcome.

UNION PACIFIC VERDICT D.SASTROUS

Be Made by League of Municipalities to Secure Direct Benefits from Railroad Taxation.

The ruling of Judge McPherson of the federal court that the east half of the Union Pacific's bridge across the Missouri is not liable for assessment for city taxes is a severe blow to Council Bluffs. Mayor Jennings and other city officials are much worried over the outcome of the suit, as it means not only the loss of $14,000 in back taxes on which the city had been relying. but also an annual loss in the income of the city of close upon $3,000. For the city to bave its annual revenues cut down $3,000 with its finances at the low ebb that they are now is a serious matter.

Mayor Jennings, when attending the meeting of the League of Iowa Municipalities next week, will probably bring the question of taxing railroad companies up for discussion, with a suggestion that the law be so amended as to give cities more direct benefit from such taxation. As it now is the state derives the greatest benefit from the taxation of the railroads, while cities receive but the small end of it. It is claimed that the city does not receive a railroads when the property owned and occupled by them is taken into consideration.

ADMITS DOYLE IS PARTNER Burns is So Quoted by Several Witnesses in Great Mining

The trial of the Doyle-Burns case in the district court yesterday was marked by several spats between the opposing attorneys, much to the edification of the large crowd of spectators, and Judge Macy was on more than one occasion appealed to to restore peace and keep the attorneys in bounds.

The first wrangle occurred when Senstor Patterson, counsel for Burns, took umwas cross-examining one of the witnesses. C. J. Hughes, ir. a millionaire attorney of Denver, who arrived yesterday morning as assistant counsel for Doyle, was telling is client something which made both of them laugh. Senator Patterson thought they were laughing at him and appealed to the court. "We were not laughing at you, Mr. Paterson; you are too much of a baby to sugh at," retorted Attorney Hughes, while George S. Wright, of the firm of Wright & Baldwin, said: "We would not think for a moment of laughing at Senator Patterson," laying emphasis on the senator. This only added fuel to the flames, and Senator Patterson again appealed to Judge Macy. The court suggested that Mr. Patterson was probably mistaken and advised that counsel proceed with the trial of the caso with due decorum.

Just before the adjournment of court John N. Baldwin took exception to the eferences made about him by Senator Patterson and the court again was appealed to. Senator Patterson alluded more than once to Mr. Baldwin's pretended air of innocence and this annoyed Mr. Baldwin. After the retort discourteous had been passed between the two eminent attorneys the court took a hand and threw oil on the troubled waters.

These spats are but one indication of the bitter manner in which both sides are fighting the case. Five witnesses for the plaintiff were ex-mined. W. L. Fyffe, W. G. Fernay, E. A. Prentice. R. B. Maxwell of Cripple Creek and E. B. Sprague of Colorado Springs. Their testimony was mainly relative to the history of the early days of the Cripple Creek camp and tended to show that on all occasions James F. Burns, the defendant, had admitted that Doyle was his partner in all their mining transactions.

C. A. Prentice testified that Burns had told him specially on more than one occasion that Doyle was his partner and that he and Doyle were locating everything as equal partners. He said that Burns had told him that he had known Jimmy Doyle a long time and that he was all right and would stand pat on any kind of a proposition and that he felt toward him as he did toward a younger brother. Prentice was prospecting himself in the Cripple Creek district at the same time as Burns and Doyle, and his testimony was a strong point in Doyle's favor.

The other witnesses all testified to Burns calling Doyle his partner on all occasions.

Bert Owens, indicted on the charge of breaking into Lloyd's grocery on Broadway and stealing a gun and other articles, entered a plea of guilty before Judge Macy in the district court yesterday afternoon and asked that sentence be imposed. The court gave him a fine of $10 and costs and thirty days in the county jail.

William Breeding, indicted for disposing of certain property which he had mortgaged to A. A. Clark & Co., of this city, pleaded guilty and was fined $25 and costs, value of the mortgaged goods being fixed at $10. It is understood Breeding setled his indebtedness to Clark & Co.

Hon. T. J. Phillips, mayor of Ottumwa and democratic candidate for governor of Iowa, was in Council Bluffs yesterday, conferring with the leaders of the local democ racy. A number of the leading democrats called upon him at the Grand hotel, where Mr. Phillips talked as seriously about the campaign in Pottawattamie as if there was a chance of his being elected chief executive of the state.

Under the guidance of Brooks Reed, chairman of the county central committee, Mr. Phillips was escorted around the city, visiting several of the leading democrats at their places of business. Mr. Phillips sustained his reputation of being quite a handshaker and was pleased with his visit. He was accompanied by C. H. Myers, member of the city council of Ottumwa. who is acting mayor while Mr. Phillips is campaigning through the state. From here Mr. Phillips went to Hamburg, where be will continue his handshaking campaign.

ALSTON CASE BEFORE SUPREME COURT

Decisions Rendered in Several Law suits-Car Breakers Sent to Prison for Five Years.

(From a Staff Correspondent.) DES MOINES, Oct. 2 .- (Special.) -Miss Elsie Fry of Corydon was burned to death last night at the State Industrial School for Girls at Mitchellville in this county She had been out during the evening with friends, returned about 9 o'clock, went to her room and retired. An hour later the night watch heard a scream and saw a light at her window. The door was broken open and Miss Fry was found enveloped in flames. She had evidently prepared for bed without lighting the lamp, and afterward struck a match for some purpose and her gown caught fire. She was so badly burned that she had lost consciousness when the fire was put out. She died at 4

Miss Fry had been an inmate of the Inday, October 1; children 4 p. m., adults dustrial school, but had proved so trust-8 p. m. Complimentary reception to past worthy that she was placed in charge of one of the wards. She manifested a desire to engage in institution work and as she had made such a fine record she was paroled and given a position as matron in charge of the sewing on the payroll of the institution. This was the first such privilege that had ever been accorded any inmate of the institution. She was greatly loved by all the girls under her charge and was a much valued employe. Her parents morning with oral arguments in the somewhat famous Alston case from Henry county. This case involves the right of inheritance of a natural son, now nearly 60 years old, who was born in Henry county and has always lived there. In an epinion given by the court in May last the decisions of the lower court were overturned and the right to inherit affirmed. The case involves the domestic relations of a prominent and wealthy resident of the county and his family, going back to a time before the adoption of the code of 1851 and involving a question as to whether the change in the law of inheritance made in the Iowa code at that time gives the plaintiff in this case a standing in court. The petition for rehearing was one of the most elaborate ever presented and assails the previous decision of the court in severe language.

Decisions Rendered. These are the decisions rendered by the court today:

Emma Garrett against Robert Garrett, appellant; Louisa county, Judge Wethrow; divorce case, involving custody of child; reversed.

Melander & Co. against C., M. & St. P.

MAKING OF LIQUEURS.

Varieties Are Produced.

Liqueurs, the alcoholic cordials now universally used, are almost entirely of contimental origin. Though they are numerous and are prepared by many different processes, reletes the London Post, they have one characteristic in common. Their bouquet is more that of a perfume than of a liquor and the teste is agreeably sweet. Some of them have a history extending over centuries and yet the secret of their manufacture has been so well concealed that the monastic communities in which they were first produced still continue in absolute possession of the recipe and enjoy the financial proceeds of what is to all in tents and purposes a monopoly. Benedictine is one of the most ancient liqueurs and is said to date from 665 A. D., but it was not until the year 1500 tha Dom Bernardo Vincelli, a monk resident in the Abbey of Fecamp, who had a profound knowledge of the plants and used in the preparation of medicinal cor-dials, succeeded in producing a liqueur which preserves the name and fame of his order. It is said that the monks, when tired with their studies, restored their strength by taking the simple cordial and all sorts of other virtues were ascribed to The new distillery at Fecamp is a palatial building, a memorial of the past success and present progress of the industry.

In the laboratory there are gigantic tunshaped vats containing 110,000 gallons of the liqueur and in underground cellars is stored the produce of the distillation of the plants.

Chartreuse is named after the original Carthusian monastery founded during the eleventh century in a wild and romantic valley forming a portion of the French Department of Isere. This liqueur has a large sale in the United Kingdom, both the green and vellow kinds being popular. Chartreuse is distilled from various herbs, which are supposed to possess various aromatic and stimulating properties. Its repute has been maintained by the monks despite the enormous difficulties which they have had to encounter from time to time The order is supposed to have been considerably enriched by the revenue from the industry. The monastery containing the distillery has long been a famous resort of visitors. The sales of this liqueur in Englang are very considerable.

Curacoa receives its trade description from one of the Dutch West Indies, where are grown the oranges from the dried peel of which the well known liqueur is made Most of the liqueur is imported from Hol land, the center of its manufacture. The orange peel, after being carefully dried, is macerated with water and afterward dis tilled with spirit and water. When taken from the still it is sweetened with sugar and to make it more palatable a little Jamaica rum is frequently added. Those who have made the experiment state that pleasant imitation of curacoa can be prepared from the fresh peel of bitter oranges and whisky. As an after dinner cordial curacon is a great favorite of the public.

Maraschino, a sweet and highly flavored liqueur, is distilled from cherries bruised both wild and cultivated kinds of fruit be ing used. Kirschwasser is gradually making for itself a same as a choice liqueur. It is obtained by distillation from cherries and the kernals taken from cherry stones. The cherries are gathered when they are quite ripe, are then pounded in a wooden vessel, but so carefully that the stones are not broken. In this condition they are left to ferment. As soon as fermentation has begun the materials are stirred two or three times a day. Subsequently the stones of the cherries are broken, the kernals taken out, bruised and thrown in with the fruit. Kummel, another sweetened spirit imported from Russia and Germany, derives its title from the German name of the berb cumin, with which it is flavored though caraway seeds are also used for the same purpose. For this liqueur there is also a growing demand, particularly in London. Anise seed cordial, frequently taken as stomachic, is not a distilled liquor, but is prepared by flavoring weak spirit with anise seed, coriander (the seed of a European plant which has become naturalized in some parts of England), and sweet fennel seed Corlander seed has an agreeable aromatismell and a sweetish, aromatic taste. It is the essential ingredient of the cordial. which is sweetened with clarified syrup of refined sugar. Clove cordial is more useful n the household than as and crinary liqueur It is made from spirit flavored with cloves which have been bruised. Color is imparted by the addition of burnt sugar. Peppermint common form of liqueur, usually consists of the ordinary sweetened gin flavored with he essential oil of peppermint, which is previously rubbed up with refined sugar. Other cordials will, no doubt, occur to the minds of the reader, but the foregoing list includes those best known in commerce and most freely used by ordinary people. TIPSY BEARS IN TROUBLE.

succumb to the Seductive Influence o Molasses and Whisky. Life in a logging camp is rather strenuous, relates the Portland Oregonian, especially in the great fir forests along the Columbia river, where many of the trees were 100 years old when Columbus discovered America and where ocasionally such trees are found growing over the trunk of a prehistoric cedar of the same or greater age. The loggers, however, have lots of fun ocasionally, and such fun as dwellers in cities would give all their old ciothes to have a share in.

Nels Thorshammer, a big, double-fisted Norwegian, who used to hunt bears in his own country, but who has for some time been working in a logging camp on the Clatskanie, was in the city yesterday and was telling of the sport the men in camp had with a family of bears last week. The bears had been causing trouble by eating the tallow used to grease the "skids" forming the roads over which the logs are hauled to the river. They would lick off every particle of the greese and as soon as it was renewed would lick it off again. The old bears had been seen several times and were husky, unamiable looking brutes and none of the loggers cared to go hunting for them. Nels told the boys how they could have some fun with the bears and get rid of them at the same time. A large tin pan was procured into which several gallons It had such a pleasant smell and tastesomething like "peach and honey"-that drinking it, but he finally got it safely planted about the center of the skid road. where the bears were numerous.
